Master Gardeners of Bergen County

SAVE THE DATE

Annual Master Gardener Picnic Tuesday, June 13, noon-2 pm Van Saun Park, Pavilion 1 (next to Walden Pond and before the Howland Avenue exit)

Spouses are invited. The MG of BC will provide entrees and beverages. Members should bring appetizers or desserts.

- Last names starting with A to M: Bring an appetizer.
- Last names starting with N to Z: Bring a dessert.

Volunteers are needed to help with the setup at 10 am and the cleanup at the end. Contact Hank Annunziata at hannunz@optonline.net or 201-837-0062 to volunteer.

From the President's Desk

It's been a year since we produced our last Master Gardeners Directory, and the 2017 edition is now available. As you may know, we have a list of MG members and students in the "Members" section of our website, but if you're like me, you may also like a printed copy for quick reference. If so, you can download a PDF file to your computer, or print a copy. If there's anyone who can't print a copy, contact me and I'll print one for you. Special thanks to Terri Pegg for taking over membership and finalizing the directory for us. I would also like to thank John Walters for his years of serving as vice president, membership chair, and state representative to the Rutgers Master Gardeners Association of New Jersey. This is on top of all the volunteering he did at sites and events since graduating in 2012.

Happy gardening!

MG volunteers needed for the 2017 Snyder Farm Open House and Great Tomato Tasting

Volunteers are needed Aug. 28-31 for the set-up, event, and clean-up of the Great Tomato Tasting and Open House at the Snyder Research and Extension Farm, 140 Locust Grove Road, Pittstown (Hunterdon County). The event is sponsored by Rutgers New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station and Rutgers Cooperative Extension. The event includes the tasting of more than 80 heirloom and hybrid varieties of beefsteak, plum, cherry, and grape tomatoes. Other highlights include tastings of a variety of farm-grown fruits and vegetables and recipes featuring Jersey Fresh produce.

- Click here to sign up for a date, time, and activity.
- Enter your email address and other required information. (You won't need to create an account on SignUp.com.
- Choose the date and time you want to volunteer and click "save" before you exit the website. If you don't want to receive email updates from SignUp.com, deselect that option on the final screen. You'll receive an automated email from SignUp.com after completing your sign-up.

Volunteer MGs must check in at the sign-in/sign-out tent near the main farm building and are expected to wear and display their official Rutgers Master Gardener name badges during their volunteer shift.

For more information about volunteering, contact Ashley White at awhite@co.somerset.nj.us or 908-526-6293, ext. 4. For more information about the event itself, click here.

Meet Diane Ford, Class of 2003

By Miriam Taub

Ask Diane Ford where she's lived before settling in Leonia. Her reply: Buffalo, Long Island, California, New York City, and Kabul, Afghanistan.

Diane grew up in Buffalo. She and her brother spent their summers on her grandparents 72-acre "gentleman's farm" in nearby Boston, NY. Among other farm chores, Diane dug potatoes and picked and sold strawberries on the side of the road for the sizable sum of three quarts for a quarter. The time was the 1930s.

"I was always interested in the farming aspect, growing food," she recalled. "The Buffalo area had wonderful farms around it." Fast forward six decades and Diane was one of the founders of the Leonia Community Garden, which was opened on borough-owned land on Pine Hill Road in 1997. On her 10-by-10-foot plot, Diane grows tomatoes, green beans, Swiss chard, and peppers – and has a strawberry patch. Otherwise, the only place for her to grow tomatoes is on her deck as Diane's back yard is mostly shaded and on a slope frequently visited by woodchucks, deer, rabbits, and wild turkey. Diane, who is 85, went to Buffalo State Teachers College along with Thomas Ford, the man who would become her husband. (They met in high school.) After college graduation and a breakup, Diane was bitten by the exploration bug. She got a job teaching elementary school in Bethpage on Long Island and the following year took a teaching job in Long Beach, CA.

"In those days if you had fairly good academic standing, you could have a job any place you wanted," she explained. Then she and Tom got reacquainted. They married and moved to New York City where both studied for master's degree at Teachers College, Columbia University.

In 1959, Tom took a job in Kabul, Afghanistan, where they lived for two years. He was part of a Teachers College team, contracted by the U.S. government whose mission was to work with university faculty and administration to help set up a guidance program at the University of Kabul. At the same time, representatives from other U.S. universities and other countries were there to help improve specific areas of Afghan infrastructure, such as roads and airports. While they lived in a protected area, Diane says they did have the chance to travel to Russia, Japan, India, and Thailand. In retrospect, she said there was not much mingling with the Afghans. When Tom's Afghan colleagues were invited to their home, only the men would come, never their wives.

Back in the USA, Diane and Tom eventually settled in Leonia where Diane returned to teaching. The Ford family consists of daughters Christine, Caryn, and Kim; five grandchildren; and a great-grandson. Tom Ford, who served as Leonia mayor for one term, died in 2015.

Diane joined the Master Gardeners after seeing an article in the newspaper. She said she has been a volunteer at Garretson Forge and Farm since 2004. Currently, she is corresponding secretary on the Board of Directors ("I write the thank-you notes," she said). She enjoys Garretson because of the variety of things to do, such as planting herbs and vegetables and setting up the spring and fall festivals and the Dutch Christmas.

In addition, Diane is a member of the Leonia Chapter of the PEO (Philanthropic Educational Organization) Sisterhood, an international organization committed to helping women pursue higher education. The organization's motto is "women helping women reach for the stars." She is co-chair of Oelhaf House, a haven for abused women and children, which is affiliated with the Center for Hope and Safety. She is also on the committee of the Leonia Sculpture Garden.

Hermitage Event Remembers WWI

By Melody Corcoran and Linda Flynn

Master Gardeners volunteered during a World War 1 Centennial Bazaar at the Hermitage May 20. Member museums of the Northwest Bergen History Coalition provided WWI artifacts and demonstrations. Among the other events were a plant sale and the sale of fragrant soaps made by MGs from the plants grown in the Hermitage gardens.

Trained Master Gardeners offered tours of the Hermitage's Victorian herb garden and described cooking and medicinal uses of its herbs. In the new liberty vegetable garden, MGs related the history of the National War Garden Commission, established during WW1, to encourage American citizens to transform idle land into productive vegetable gardens in support of the war effort.

The liberty garden, planted for the first time this spring, contains produce that would have been planted in similar WW1 gardens, such as tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, peas, beans, radishes, and lettuce. The garden contains chicken-wire cloches and tepee trellises made by the gardeners to support young plants/climbing plants.

SHOWS, CONFERENCES & WORKSHOPS

Thielke Arboretum Sponsors 2 Workshops

Join Carolyn Rubinfeld, the NJ Watershed ambassador for the Lower Passaic and Saddle rivers, at the Thielke Arboretum, 460 Doremus Ave., Glen Rock, on Saturday, June 3 from 1-4 pm for a unique opportunity to become a citizen scientist. Rain date is June 4.

Carolyn will work with participants in small groups to determine what attributes of Diamond Brook are supportive and necessary for the stream bugs (macroinvertebrates). She will discuss the importance these bugs play in stream quality. You can be an observer or a hands-on explorer.

If you'd like to gather samples in the brook, wear sturdy shoes and bring rain boots, sunscreen, and water. This program is free for adults and teens. Meanwhile, a second workshop will be offered for children entering grades 3-6 who are interested in bugs. On Friday, June 23 from 10 am-noon, Carolyn Rubinfeld will explore the bugs that live in Diamond Brook. Carolyn will guide young participants in collecting, identifying, and comparing/contrasting these finds to other bugs drawn from a pristine stream in Morris County. Primary points will include the impact of fertilizer runoff, sedimentation build-up, and poor quality oxygen supply in Diamond Brook.

This is a hands-on, highly supervised outdoor workshop, rain or shine and limited to 12 children. Children should wear boots and a hat and bring sunscreen and water. Early registration is recommended. Register online at www.glenrockarboretum.org. Cost is $10 for members, and $15 for non-members.

Bill Kolvek's Plant Sale Wednesday, June 7

5 De Salvo Court, Chestnut Ridge, NY, just over the border from Montvale, telephone: 845-735-2904.

Many of us remember Bill Kolvek's June plant sales prior to 2016. Bill is back in business and will sell plants at his nursery from 10 am-12:30 pm. Bill's selection is smaller than it was in the past, but he still has many plants to choose from, including a good selection of natives.

Please join us, shop, and take a tour with Bill. Light refreshments will be served. For more information, call Donna Karpel at 201-248-9189. Cash or check only.

Catskill Native Nursery Thursday, June 15

607 Samsonville Road, Kerhonkson, NY 12446, five miles from Route 209.

Catskill Native Nursery has been inspiring gardeners since 1999 to create biodiverse and remarkably ornamental gardens using plants that are native to eastern North America. Catskill Native nursery specializes in nursery-propagated North American perennials, fruits, shrubs, and trees. Native plants are a natural choice for woodland, meadow, and aquatic gardens. Most are equally at home in the flower borders around your house. Native plants are ornamental, easy to maintain, and provide food and habitat for birds, butterflies, bees, and other wildlife and for you.

Many natives are becoming scarce in the wild. You can help to restore biodiversity by adding native plants to your landscape. Come and browse the unique beauty and garden-worthiness of our native flora. A 10% discount will be offered. No charge for the tour.

Contact Josie_ko1@hotmail.com to sign up; deadline is June 11.
